

Social Justice and Social Science:
A CONVERSATION WITH CAROL STACK

All Our Kin invites you to a talk by Carol Stack author of the groundbreaking book

All Our Kin: Strategies for Survival in a Black Community

Thursday, April 24, 2008 from 5 to 6:30 p.m.

The Community Foundation for Greater New Haven
70 Audubon Street, New Haven

Dr. Stack, Professor Emeritus at the University of California, Berkeley, is a noted anthropologist, educator, and author. She writes on urban and rural poverty, family policy, and race, ethnicity and youth in the United States. Dr. Stack has been honored across the nation for her contributions to the anthropology of the U.S., scholarship on African American kinship and political culture, and her critical interventions in public policy-making about family and work.

All Our Kin is a New Haven-based nonprofit dedicated to educating and empowering parents and teachers, giving families child care choices, and expanding access to high-quality early care and education for our most underserved children.
